Sarah Ferguson and Andrew Mountbatten Windsor, formerly known as Prince Andrew, have been exes longer than they were ever married. Despite their marriage ending, the second son of Queen Elizabeth II and his former wife have remained fixtures in each other's lives, with Fergie even once describing the two of them as "the happiest divorced couple."Though before holding that title, the former Duke of York and Fergie, as she is affectionately known, were husband and wife. After getting engaged in 1986, the pair, who are said to have been introduced by Princess Diana, wed that July at London's Westminster Abbey, an occasion Fergie has previously called "the happiest day of my life."Two years later, Sarah and Andrew became parents with the birth of their daughter Princess Beatrice, followed by their second child, Princess Eugenie, in 1990. However, after nearly six years of marriage, the parents of two separate in March 1992. Although they have managed to be happily divorced, they were not happily married. "The main problem with the marriage, really, was that he was in the Navy," Phil Dampier, royal author and expert, explains to HELLO!. "[Andrew] was away for months, month, months on end. She got very bored, very quickly and found constant scrutiny as a royal, much harder than I think she possibly thought. Possibly didn't get enough support from the family."In an interview with Fergie, Harper's Bazaar reported that her and Andrew's separation was triggered by the demands of his naval career, which limited the couple's time together to just 40 days a year for the first five years. The pair ultimately went on to divorce in 1996. "I didn't want a divorce but had to because of circumstance," Fergie confessed to Harper's Bazaar in 2011, referring to it as "the most painful time of my life." She said: "I wanted to work; it's not right for a princess of the royal house to be ceremonial, so Andrew and I decided to make the divorce official so I could go off and get a job." © Hulton Archive/Getty ImagesSarah married Andrew in 1986 While they went their separate ways, the former couple continued to live together at Royal Lodge, and Fergie has remained a staunch supporter of her ex-husband. "My duty is to him. I am so proud of him. I stand by him and always will. The way we are is our fairy tale," Sarah told the Daily Mail in 2018. "Although we are not a couple, we really believe in each other. The Yorks are a united family."Though Phil muses that behind closed doors, Andrew and Sarah's relationship is possibly not as strong as it looks in public. He tells HELLO!: "I think it just suited them initially with the children, then they just kind of got stuck in a groove and have just been almost can't live with each other, can't live without each other, sort of thing. Just bolted together through their mutual sort of lifestyles." © UK Press/Getty ImagesThe exes (pictured in 2003) share two daughters: Princess Eugenie and Princess Beatrice But then why maintain the relationship personally or publicly? "Fergie just, quite simply, got a roof over her head all these years, which she would have found difficult to have that lifestyle because she's just incapable of keeping money," Phil believes, while for Andrew "he's had the stability for his daughters, for the mother, being around while he went off all around the world, let's be honest, enjoying himself."As Andrew fell from grace over the Epstein scandal, his ex-wife repeatedly came to his defence, and he, in turn, has shown the same loyalty toward her. "He stood by her. She stood by him because they've both been as bad as one another, to be honest about it. They've both been involved in scandal. So it's a kind of mutual survival," Phil says, adding, "They've been welded together by a sort of mutual self-interest, and possibly brought out the worst in each other." You may also like Andrew announced on October 17 that he would no longer use his title or the honours that had been conferred upon him, a source told HELLO! that Sarah "will always support her former husband's decisions." Seventeen days later, Buckingham Palace issued a statement revealing that King Charles had on October 30 initiated a formal process to remove the style, titles and honours of his brother Andrew. "Prince Andrew will now be known as Andrew Mountbatten Windsor. His lease on Royal Lodge has, to date, provided him with legal protection to continue in residence," the statement read. "Formal notice has now been served to surrender the lease and he will move to alternative private accommodation. These censures are deemed necessary, notwithstanding the fact that he continues to deny the allegations against him. Their Majesties wish to make clear that their thoughts and utmost sympathies have been, and will remain with, the victims and survivors of any and all forms of abuse."HELLO! understands that Andrew will be moving to a property on the private Sandringham estate. Meanwhile, Sarah is understood to be making her own arrangements. Pressure had been mounting on the couple to move out of Royal Lodge prior to the palace's announcement on October 30. © Karwai Tang/WireImageAndrew and Sarah will both be leaving Royal Lodge As for whether the former couple's friendship will continue now that they are both leaving Royal Lodge remains to be seen. Hours before the palace's statement, Phil remarked to HELLO!: "If they hadn't been under pressure to leave Royal Lodge, I think they would have carried on as before. But if she does go into a separate property, be it abroad or be it in Australia with her sister or something, or if she moves into Adelaide Cottage, or if she moves into a house in London, or whatever happens, I think if they do actually physically live apart, I think that could be the beginning of the end for their relationship, in the sense that I don't think their relationship will be quite the same." "Especially now the kids are grown up," Phil continued. "This whole saga could have crept up in their relationship, which behind closed doors, is probably not as close as people think." The first occasion allegedly occurred in Maxwell's London townhouse in March 2001. In the court filings and in her memoir released in October 2025, she claimed the other occasions occurred at Epstein's New York mansion and his private Caribbean island.June 2008Epstein admits to prostituting minors and is convicted, receiving an 18-month prison sentence.2009"Epstein's former housekeeper, Juan Alessi, testifies during his employer's trial that Andrew received "daily massages" at Epstein's Florida home.July 2009Epstein is released from prison.December 2010Andrew is photographed with Epstein in New York's Central Park.February 2011The Mail on Sunday publishes a photo of Virginia's alleged first meeting with Prince Andrew. Andrew later emails Epstein saying "we are in this together".March 2011Alastair Watson - who spent nine years as Andrew's private secretary - writes to The Times saying Andrew met Epstein in the "early 1990s". Yet eight years later, Andrew told Newsnight that he first encountered Epstein through his "girlfriend back in 1999", later saying he saw Epstein "infrequently and probably no more than once or twice a year" July 2011Andrew resigns as UK trade envoy shortly after December 2014in a Florida court filing, Virginia alleges being trafficked by Epstein and also alleges to have been forced to have sex with him, Prince Andrew and other men. The judge later said in 2015 the claims are "immaterial and impertinent" to the case against Epstein.January 2015Buckingham Palace denies Andrew has committed any impropriety after he is named in US documents linked to Epstein. At the World Economic Forum in Davos, Andrew makes his first public engagement since the allegations. He says: "I just wish to reiterate, and to reaffirm, the statements that have already been made on my behalf by Buckingham Palace."2015"n a civil suit filed against Ghislaine Maxwell, Giuffrè testifies that Epstein paid her $15,000 to have sex with Andrew.May 2016During a deposition in her case against Maxwell, it emerges that Giuffrè told the infamous photo to the FBI in 2011 but allegedly last saw it packed in a box and shipped from Colorado to Sydney sometime between 2011 and 2016, when she emigrated to Australia.June 2018Alleged Chinese spy Yang Tengbo visits Buckingham Palace twice to meet Andrew. He is also said to gain entry to St James's Palace and Windsor Castle after being invited by the Prince.2019A newly released document includes a claim from Johanna Sjoborg, who has said she was an associate of Jeffrey Epstein, alleging that Prince Andrew touched her breast while she was sitting on a couch in Epstein's Manhattan apartment in 2001 - an allegation he has always denied.August 2019Epstein is found dead in his prison cell on 10 August, an apparent suicide, after being charged with sex trafficking.Separately David Rogers, a pilot on Epstein's private jet, claims Andrew was a passenger on past flights with Epstein and Giuffrè. Rogers also testifies that Epstein, Andrew and Giuffrè travelled to the US Virgin Islands on 11 April 2001.Buckingham Palace says the report contains "inconsistencies" and notes that in some cases Andrew was on a different continent.In a statement, the Palace says Andrew is "appalled by the recent reports of Jeffrey Epstein's alleged crimes". Andrew also issues a statement: "At no stage during the limited time I spend with him (Epstein) do I see, witness or suspect any behaviour of the sort that subsequently leads to his arrest and conviction." November 2019"iC Newsnight broadcasts an interview in which Andrew speaks about his military roles and royal patronage, and he relinquishes his HRH title. Buckingham Palace states Andrew "continues not to undertake any public duties" and is defending this case as a private citizen."February 2022Court documents reveal that Andrew and Giuffrè reach a "settlement in principle" in the civil claim. The papers say Andrew and Giuffrè made a "substantial donation" to Giuffrè's charity "in support of victims' rights", and pledged to "demonstrate his regret for his association with Epstein."January 2024Unsealed documents linked to Ms Giuffrè's civil claim against Ghislaine Maxwell revisit previously made allegations about Prince Andrew - including references to purported sex tapes and claims he was present at an event involving underage girls. Andrew has always denied any involvement in criminal activity.December 2024At a High Court hearing it emerges that Yang Tengbo, the alleged Chinese spy, is a "close" confidant of Andrew. Andrew issues a statement saying he ceased "all contact" with Yang once concerns arose.Andrew is absent from the royal family's traditional gathering at Sandringham April 2025Giuffrè tragically dies by suicide aged 41 in Neeragabb, Western Australia. October 2025An email reportedly sent by Prince Andrew to Jeffrey Epstein in 2011 - in which he is said to have written, "We are in this together" - has been unearthed by The Sun and is being described as a potential "smoking gun." Andrew has consistently denied any wrongdoing. Speaking exclusively to HELLO!, Nicole quipped: "Oh, there's no wedding planning, honey. When you do Broadway, it's only Broadway. You eat, sleep - you don't sleep much - and breathe Broadway."Not that Thom seems to mind: "Thank God I have a very understanding and wonderful and the most supportive fiancé," she added.Her next dream role © Getty ImagesNicole Scherzinger accepted the Best Performance for an Actress in a Leading Role in a Musical Nicole previously spoke of her hopes for a wedding in her Hawaiian birthplace, with a reception "somewhere in Europe," but in the wake of her Broadway success, it looks as though the couple may wait even longer to say "I Do." "I still want to do more," Nicole said. "This moment has made me dream again. Growing up as a Filipino girl, I always loved Miss Saigon. I would love to be a part of that show. Aurora in Kiss of the Spider Woman is another dream role. Another is to maybe create my own musical." Maybe even Hollywood beckons? "I'd love some really bold and daring film roles," she revealed. "I'd love to do a movie musical - maybe Sunset Boulevard as a movie. More than anything, I want to keep on doing stuff that shows all of me." Reaching a peak © Getty ImagesShe wants to take on more roles The musical-theatre powerhouse was named Best Leading Actress in a Musical for her performance as Norma Desmond in the reboot of Andrew Lloyd Webber's classic.After the ceremony, she said: "This is a dream role come true - a dream role that I never knew was coming until [director] Jamie Lloyd had this vision of me as Norma Desmond." Nicole was born in Hawaii and grew up in Kentucky with parents of Filipino, Ukrainian and native Hawaiian heritage."It just felt so right, as if everything that had happened in my life - all of the pain, struggle, confusion, emptiness and loneliness - led to this moment," she said. "I put all those emotions into Norma, into every performance. As Norma says: 'I feel like I'm back where I was born to be.' I really do feel like I was born for this." Convincing her critics © Dave Benet/Getty ImagesNicole with Lord Andrew Lloyd Webber in her acceptance speech. Nicole thanked Sunset Boulevard's composer Andrew Lloyd Webber, who has become one of her biggest champions - a relationship that would have been unthinkable nine years ago.After Nicole chose to return to her judging role on The X Factor rather than appear in his production of Cats on Broadway, the disgruntled composer said she would "never get her Tony Award."It had been an "honor" to work with him, Nicole said in her acceptance speech. "You sav in me what no one else did. You have given us all new ways to dream and you have changed my life for ever."So grateful © Getty ImagesNicole at the opening night of the show in New York City It's more than 20 years since Nicole shot to fame as a member of girl band The Pussycat Dolls, but it's only now that the star feels that she is being seen for who she is. "I always felt as though I wasn't able to show my full potential," she said. "No matter what I achieved, I was never satisfied. I was just waiting for a chance to show more of who I knew I could do." I'm grateful for that time but feel I'm in a better place now. I'm proud of what we achieved, but it was a crazy time. I still miss the girls, but it's liberating to be doing something that shows me for who I really am. © Getty Nicole is a vocal powerhouse "Sunset Boulevard was the opportunity I'd been waiting for all my life. This show has changed my life in so many ways. I'm so grateful that I was given that chance." Performing on Broadway was a long-time ambition. "It's unbelievable," she exclaimed. "Broadway is like no other community I've ever experienced. The way talent is nurtured and hard work is championed is so inspiring. "I'm so grateful for the way the Broadway community welcomed me, supported me and continues to embrace me. It feels as if "I'm part of something very special." Thom has been one of Nicole's most vocal cheerleaders since they went red-carpet official with their romance at the 2020 Golden Globes after meeting on The X Factor: Celebrity the previous year. © Getty ImagesTheir wedding will have to wait He proposed to Nicole on a beach in Portugal in 2023, and that year, he wrote on Instagram: "Just wow! I saw Sunset Boulevard last night and was completely blown away. Nicole Scherzinger your performance was truly MESMERISING."When his partner won an Olivier Award the following year, he said: "Words cannot express how proud I am of you my love... NO ONE is more deserving of such a prestigious accolade."
