Paramount+ Premium Guess what? Dexter Morgan is back on television in the new series, Dexter: Resurrection. After miraculously surviving a gunshot wound in New Blood, Dexter heads to the Big Apple to repair his relationship with his son. Trouble always seems to find Dexter, and a familiar face might have discovered his dark secret. Elsewhere, Lena Dunham makes her triumphant return to television with the rom-com Too Much, her first series since Girls. Also, Maggie Q joins Prime Video's Bosch universe for the spinoff, Ballard. Scroll below for all of our television recommendations. When you're done here, check out the best new movies to stream this week, as well as the best shows on Netflix, the best shows on Hulu, the best new shows on HBO Max, the best shows on Amazon Prime Video, and the best shows on Disney+. Netflix, Hulu, Amazon Prime Video, HBO Max, Disney+, Paramount+, Peacock, and Apple TV+ all have one thing in common: They're more expensive than they used to be. We can live with higher rates as long as new shows keep coming, but it's always a good idea to consider signing up for the ad-supported tiers, which are worth it if you can sit through a few commercials. Dexter Morgan (Michael C. Hall) is not dead in Dexter: Resurrection. After surviving a gunshot wound at the hands of his son, Harrison (Jack Alcott), in New Blood, Dexter wakes up from a coma with a new sense of purpose. Dexter finally understands the weight of his actions and travels to New York City to patch things up with Harrison. While Harrison wants nothing to do with his father, he finds himself following in the family's footsteps and intervening when the opportunity presents itself. As Harrison confronts his demons, Dexter must navigate the arrival of Angel Batista (Daryl Zayas), his former Miami PD colleague, who might have discovered his homicidal ways. Girls creator Lena Dunham returns to television with a new rom-com show, Too Much. Workaholic Jessica (Meghan Stalter) receives the worst news of her life: her boyfriend, Zev (Michael Zegen), ends their relationship. Adding insult to injury is the fact that Zev has a beautiful influencer fiancée, Wendy Jones (Emily Ratajkowski). Heartbroken, Jessica leaves the county and takes a job in London. Jessica has no intentions of finding love, but after meeting Felix (Will Sharpe), her views on dating significantly change. Dunham fully leans into the rom-com aspects by altering the names of popular movies for episode titles, i.e., Notting Hill, Pity Woman, and Nonsense. Netflix's most popular TV show of all time bids farewell in Squid Game season 3. At the end of season 2, Gi-hun (Lee Jung-jae) is betrayed by Front Man (Lee Byung-hun), who had been posing as a player. The betrayal also squashes the rebellion, meaning the Squid Games will continue. Gi-hun's worst nightmare has come true when he's forced into the Squid Game. The games are even deadlier this time around. While the Front Man enters a new group of VIPs, his brother, Jun-ho (Wi Ha-joon), continues his pursuit of the island. Can Gi-hun put an end to the games forever, or will he die trying? The popular Bosch universe receives a spinoff with Ballard. Based on the novels by Michael Connelly, Ballard stars Maggie Q as Renée Ballard, an LAPD detective tasked with running the new cold case unit in the Robbery-Homicide Division (RHD). Some of these cases are decades old, making Ballard's job that much harder. As she digs into these cold cases, Ballard uncovers a long line of corruption and cover-ups that threaten to shake up the LAPD. With the help of her new team and retired detective Harry Bosch (Titus Welliver), Ballard sets out to find the truth and serve justice. If you want to have a family movie night, our list of the best family movies on Netflix right now can save you a time and headaches. The last thing anyone wants to do on movie night is argue over what to watch while flicking through the options, which is why we've done the hard part for you. We update this list every month with the best family-friendly options available now. This May, three movies join the list, including two recent releases that are crowd-pleasers. Read on for the best family movies on Netflix. Read more Love is in the air on Netflix, probably because romance remains one of the most popular genres on the streamer. Between rom-coms, romantic dramas, and romance shows, Netflix is kind of cornered the market. So much so that it's no longer enough for Netflix to have Grey's Anatomy; it has a very obvious updated take on Grey's Anatomy called Pulse. Fans may prefer the original model, but Pulse has been a very strong performer since its debut. Our second pick for the month, The Lady's Companion, is a Spanish romance series that hasn't broken out yet. But this one has real potential. You can find these new additions alongside the rest of the best romance shows on Netflix below. Need more recommendations? Pulse (2025) Read more Although Amazon Prime Video has the most subscribers in the streaming wars, it releases less original content than many competitors and, usually, that content is of lesser quality. Nonetheless, it was also the first streaming service to win an Emmy with Transparent and still has a formidable library of original shows. Some of the more notable recent investments include The Boys, The Lord of the Rings: The Rings of Power, Fallout, and two popular shows that recently returned for their third seasons. This month's update sees Kevin Bacon's The Bondsman join the list, as well as new seasons from Reacher and Wheel of Time. Read on for the best Amazon Prime Video original series available now. What to watch this weekend.Credit: Paramount / A24 / Netflix I suppose it's no huge surprise that this weekend is far from the busiest when it comes to new streaming shows and movies. We are smackdab in the middle of summer, after all. Many of the year's biggest, most hotly-anticipated shows have come and gone. The big summer blockbusters have already released in theaters. A lot of 2025's remaining shows and movies will release later in the year, when temperatures cool and people are indoors more. Still, I've found some good stuff for your viewing pleasure on Netflix and elsewhere. Every week I scour the internet for all the best new releases and compile them in your friendly neighborhood streaming guide. Big news also: I finished The Shield at last! This amazing police drama has consumed just about every evening for the past couple months. I burned through all seven seasons in one very long binge. It was so good! The finale ranks among my favorite TV show finales of all time. It's rare to have a show stay this good from start to finish. The Shield pulled off seven seasons of at least ten episodes per season and I don't think there was a single bad episode. I lost sleep watching this show and I regret nothing. I'm so glad I didn't watch it when it first aired. Be sure to check out my Netflix July streaming guide to see everything headed to the most popular streaming service this month. If you have any tips or I missed something, shoot me a message on Twitter, Instagram, or Facebook. You can check out last weekend's streaming guide right here. ForbesWhat To Watch This Weekend: New Shows And Movies To Stream On Netflix, Hulu, Prime Video, Apple TV And MoreBy Erik KainThe traditional period Western isn't making the comeback a lot of us hoped for, but the new modern Western genre has seen a real comeback thanks to Yellowstone. Netflix has made its fair share of these, and Untamed is the latest. Eric Bana plays a federal agent investigating a woman's death in the wilderness of Yosemite National Park. The six-episode limited series is out now on Netflix with a decent 81% Rotten Tomatoes score (88% from audiences). Sam Neill also stars. Star Trek: Strange New Worlds — Season 3 (Paramount+) I'm way behind on Star Trek: Strange New Worlds and audience and critic reviews for the third season have dipped considerably, which makes me think maybe I'm not missing much. I haven't ever been a huge Trek fan, but modern iterations of this show have been almost universally disappointing. This show had real potential, so it's a shame to hear that it's gone downhill. Still, I still really enjoy Captain Pike and his crew so I'll probably catch up and see for myself. Billy Joel: And So It Goes (HBO Max) If you're a Billy Joel fan, you'll definitely want to watch this new documentary on HBO Max. (It's so nice to just type HBO Max now, instead of HBO / Max.) I admit, I know next to nothing about the piano-playing singer/songwriter, but I like his music. How To Train Your Dragon (VOD) I really hate most live-action remakes of classic animated movies, but I mostly blame Disney for this. Somehow, DreamWorks knocked it out of the park with its very first try. How To Train Your Dragon was a magnificent remake of the animated movie and now you can watch it at home, though you'll still have to pay for it since it's not on any streaming services yet. I ordered the 4K Blu-Ray because it deserves the best picture and sound possible. Eddington (In Theaters) Speaking of modern Westerns, Eddington has one helluva cast: Pedro Pascal, Joaquin Phoenix, Emma Stone, Luke Grimes, Austin Butler etc. The film takes place long, long ago in the year of our lord 2020, back during the dark times of COVID-19 and overcharged political tensions. Hereditary / Midsommar director Ari Aster directs. It looks fantastic on the trailer, but the movie isn't getting the review scores I'd hoped for: 67% on Rotten Tomatoes, which is still fresh but only just barely. It's possible that Aster's bleak view of humanity is just . . . too bleak, even for movie critics. What's Streaming Weekly A number of shows have drawn to a close this month. Apple's Murderbot is over. So is Season 2 of Poker Face on Peacock. HBO's Duster ended a week ago and was promptly cancelled. But we still have plenty of ongoing series airing weekly to cover. I'm watching a few of these, including the first entry. . . . Dexter: Resurrection (Paramount+) We're three episodes deep into the return of Dexter Morgan (Michael C. Hall) and so far I'm enjoying Dexter: Resurrection quite a bit, though we've still a long ways to go from the glory days of the original show's first four seasons. We pick up after the events of the new Blood and head to the Big Apple, where both Dexter and his son Harrison are slumming about, doing their thing. Lots of returning characters and some big new names, including Uma Thurman, Peter Dinklage and Krysten Ritter. We have yet to get to the meat of the story, of course, though it looks like things will kick into higher gear next week. Resident Alien — Season 4 (SyFy / Peacock) Alan Tudyk vs Alan Tudyk. It's a match made in heaven — or on an alien planet. Our hilarious lead faces off against himself in Season 4 of Resident Alien as Harry tries to stop an evil shapeshifting Mantis alien (among other threats to Earth and his friends). It's a delightful show and I highly recommend it to anyone still on the fence. The earlier seasons are on Netflix! New Season 4 episodes air a week earlier on SyFy before landing on Peacock. Foundation (Apple TV) The adaptation of Isaac Asimov's famous science-fiction work is one I've still not watched. Mostly, from what I gather from reviews and readers, it's a bad adaptation but a good series. That's better than a bad adaptation that's also a bad series (looking at you, Rings Of Power)! It's on my list. It's just a very, very long list. The Institute (MGM+) I need to start The Institute now that my evenings of The Shield have come to an end. It actually sounds like a good show to tide us over while we wait for the return of Stranger Things. The series is based on Stephen King's novel, and follows the kidnapping of a young boy who wakes up in an institute for children with super powers. I've heard positive things from readers. The third episode lands on MGM+ this Sunday. Other Currently Airing Shows Nautilus (AMC) — Based on Jules Verne's Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea, Nautilus follows Nemor's mission to exact revenge on the East India Mercantile Company Countdown (Prime Video) — Another show I need to start now that I'm no longer watching The Shield every night like some absolute junky. I do enjoy a good race-against-the-clock thriller, and while the reviews haven't been spectacular, I've heard from a lot of people that they're enjoying this one. Smoke (Apple TV+) — Aaron Egerton stars as an arson investigator who gets drawn into a murder investigation / conspiracy. Mystery author Dennis Lehane is the show's creator. Stick (Apple TV+) — Owen Wilson stars in this golf-themed feel-good comedy. Light summer character fare to offset all the grim and gritty. The Gilded Age (HBO) — The lavish HBO period drama will transport you to the "gilded age" of East Coast America in the late 19th century. Still on my backlog, but my do those costumes look lovely. The Buccaneers (Apple TV+) — The Buccaneers is more Bridgerton than Downton Abbey, but should appeal to fans of period romance and all things. BMF (Starz) — A dramatization of the rise of the Black Mafia Family in Detroit and elsewhere in the 1980s and 90s. I've heard it called the "Black Sopranos" so if that sounds like your thing, give it a shot. I went to Superman and didn't like it very much. Paramount+ Premium Guess what? Dexter Morgan is back on television in the new series, Dexter: Resurrection. After miraculously surviving a gunshot wound in New Blood, Dexter heads to the Big Apple to repair his relationship with his son. Trouble always seems to find Dexter, and a familiar face might have discovered his dark secret. Elsewhere, Lena Dunham makes her triumphant return to television with the rom-com Too Much, her first series since Girls. Also, Maggie Q joins Prime Video's Bosch universe for the spinoff, Ballard. Scroll below for all of our television recommendations. When you're done here, check out the best new movies to stream this week, as well as the best shows on Netflix, the best shows on Hulu, the best new shows on HBO Max, the best shows on Amazon Prime Video, and the best shows on Disney+. Netflix, Hulu, Amazon Prime Video, HBO Max, Disney+, Paramount+, Peacock, and Apple TV+ all have one thing in common: They're more expensive than they used to be. We can live with higher rates as long as new shows keep coming, but it's always a good idea to consider signing up for the ad-supported tiers, which are worth it if you can sit through a few commercials. Dexter Morgan (Michael C. Hall) is not dead in Dexter: Resurrection. After surviving a gunshot wound at the hands of his son, Harrison (Jack Alcott), in New Blood, Dexter wakes up from a coma with a new sense of purpose. Dexter finally understands the weight of his actions and travels to New York City to patch things up with Harrison. While Harrison wants nothing to do with his father, he finds himself following in the family's footsteps and intervening when the opportunity presents itself. As Harrison confronts his demons, Dexter must navigate the arrival of Angel Batista (Daryl Zayas), his former Miami PD colleague, who might have discovered his homicidal ways. Girls creator Lena Dunham returns to television with a new rom-com show, Too Much. Workaholic Jessica (Meghan Stalter) receives the worst news of her life: her boyfriend, Zev (Michael Zegen), ends their relationship. Adding insult to injury is the fact that Zev has a beautiful influencer fiancée, Wendy Jones (Emily Ratajkowski). Heartbroken, Jessica leaves the county and takes a job in London. Jessica has no intentions of finding love, but after meeting Felix (Will Sharpe), her views on dating significantly change. Dunham fully leans into the rom-com aspects by altering the names of popular movies for episode titles, i.e., Notting Kill, Pity Woman, and Nonsense. Netflix's most popular TV show of all time bids farewell in Squid Game season 3. At the end of season 2, Gi-hun (Lee Jung-jae) is betrayed by Front Man (Lee Byung-hun), who had been posing as a player. The betrayal also squashes the rebellion, meaning the Squid Games will continue. Gi-hun's worst nightmare has come true when he's forced into the Squid Game. The games are even deadlier this time around. While the Front Man enters a new group of VIPs, his brother, Jun-ho (Wi Ha-joon), continues his pursuit of the island. Can Gi-hun put an end to the games forever, or will he die trying? The popular Bosch universe receives a spinoff with Ballard. Based on the novels by Michael Connelly, Ballard stars Maggie Q as Renée Ballard, an LAPD detective tasked with running the new cold case unit in the Robbery-Homicide Division (RHD). Some of these cases are decades old, making Ballard's job that much harder. As she digs into these cold cases, Ballard uncovers a long line of corruption and cover-ups that threaten to shake up the LAPD. With the help of her new team and retired detective Harry Bosch (Titus Welliver), Ballard sets out to find the truth and serve justice. If you want to have a family movie night, our list of the best family movies on Netflix right now can save you a time and headaches. The last thing anyone wants to do on movie night is argue over what to watch while flicking through the options, which is why we've done the hard part for you. We update this list every month with the best family-friendly options available now. This May, three movies join the list, including two recent releases that are crowd-pleasers. Read on for the best family movies on Netflix. Read more Love is in the air on Netflix, probably because romance remains one of the most popular genres on the streamer. Between rom-coms, romantic dramas, and romance shows, Netflix is kind of cornered the market. So much so that it's no longer enough for Netflix to have Grey's Anatomy; it has a very obvious updated take on Grey's Anatomy called Pulse. Fans may prefer the original model, but Pulse has been a very strong performer since its debut. Our second pick for the month, The Lady's Companion, is a Spanish romance series that hasn't broken out yet. But this one has real potential. You can find these new additions alongside the rest of the best romance shows on Netflix below. Need more recommendations? What to watch this weekend.Credit: Paramount / A24 / Netflix I suppose it's no huge surprise that this weekend is far from the busiest when it comes to new streaming shows and movies. We are smackdab in the middle of summer, after all. Many of the year's biggest, most hotly-anticipated shows have come and gone. The big summer blockbusters have already released in theaters. A lot of 2025's remaining shows and movies will release later in the year, when temperatures cool and people are indoors more. Still, I've found some good stuff for your viewing pleasure on Netflix and elsewhere. Every week I scour the internet for all the best new releases and compile them in your friendly neighborhood streaming guide. Big news also: I finished The Shield at last! This amazing police drama has consumed just about every evening for the past couple months. I burned through all seven seasons in one very long binge. It was so good! The finale ranks among my favorite TV show finales of all time. It's rare to have a show stay this good from start to finish. The Shield pulled off seven seasons of at least ten episodes per season and I don't think there was a single bad episode. I lost sleep watching this show and I regret nothing. I'm so glad I didn't watch it when it first aired. Be sure to check out my Netflix July streaming guide to see everything headed to the most popular streaming service this month. If you have any tips or I missed something, shoot me a message on Twitter, Instagram, or Facebook. You can check out last weekend's streaming guide right here. ForbesWhat To Watch This Weekend: New Shows And Movies To Stream On Netflix, Hulu, Prime Video, Apple TV And MoreBy Erik KainThe traditional period Western isn't making the comeback a lot of us hoped for, but the new modern Western genre has seen a real comeback thanks to Yellowstone. Netflix has made its fair share of these, and Untamed is the latest. Eric Bana plays a federal agent investigating a woman's death in the wilderness of Yosemite National Park. The six-episode limited series is out now on Netflix with a decent 81% Rotten Tomatoes score (88% from audiences). Sam Neill also stars. Star Trek: Strange New Worlds — Season 3 (Paramount+) I'm way behind on Star Trek: Strange New Worlds and audience and critic reviews for the third season have dipped considerably, which makes me think maybe I'm not missing much. I haven't ever been a huge Trek fan, but modern iterations of this show have been almost universally disappointing. This show had real potential, so it's a shame to hear that it's gone downhill. Still, I still really enjoy Captain Pike and his crew so I'll probably catch up and see for myself. Billy Joel: And So It Goes (HBO Max) If you're a Billy Joel fan, you'll definitely want to watch this new documentary on HBO Max. (It's so nice to just type HBO Max now, instead of HBO / Max.) I admit, I know next to nothing about the piano-playing singer/songwriter, but I like his music. How To Train Your Dragon (VOD) I really hate most live-action remakes of classic animated movies, but I mostly blame Disney for this. Somehow, DreamWorks knocked it out of the park with its very first try. How To Train Your Dragon was a magnificent remake of the animated movie and now you can watch it at home, though you'll still have to pay for it since it's not on any streaming services yet. I ordered the 4K Blu-Ray because it deserves the best picture and sound possible. Eddington (In Theaters) Speaking of modern Westerns, Eddington has one helluva cast: Pedro Pascal, Joaquin Phoenix, Emma Stone, Luke Grimes, Austin Butler etc. The film takes place long, long ago in the year of our lord 2020, back during the dark times of COVID-19 and overcharged political tensions. Hereditary / Midsommar director Ari Aster directs. It looks fantastic on the trailer, but the movie isn't getting the review scores I'd hoped for: 67% on Rotten Tomatoes, which is still fresh but only just barely. It's possible that Aster's bleak view of humanity is just . . . too bleak, even for movie critics. What's Streaming Weekly A number of shows have drawn to a close this month. Apple's Murderbot is over. So is Season 2 of Poker Face on Peacock. HBO's Duster ended a week ago and was promptly cancelled. But we still have plenty of ongoing series airing weekly to cover. I'm watching a few of these, including the first entry. . . . Dexter: Resurrection (Paramount+) We're three episodes deep into the return of Dexter Morgan (Michael C. Hall) and so far I'm enjoying Dexter: Resurrection quite a bit, though we've still a long ways to go from the glory days of the original show's first four seasons. We pick up after the events of the new Blood and head to the Big Apple, where both Dexter and his son Harrison are slumming about, doing their thing. Lots of returning characters and some big new names, including Uma Thurman, Peter Dinklage and Krysten Ritter. We have yet to get to the meat of the story, of course, though it looks like things will kick into higher gear next week. Resident Alien — Season 4 (SyFy / Peacock) Alan Tudyk vs Alan Tudyk. It's a match made in heaven — or on an alien planet. Our hilarious lead faces off against himself in Season 4 of Resident Alien as Harry tries to stop an evil shapeshifting Mantis alien (among other threats to Earth and his friends). It's a delightful show and I highly recommend it to anyone still on the fence. The earlier seasons are on Netflix! New Season 4 episodes air a week earlier on SyFy before landing on Peacock. Foundation (Apple TV) The adaptation of Isaac Asimov's famous science-fiction work is one I've still not watched. Mostly, from what I gather from reviews and readers, it's a bad adaptation but a good series. That's better than a bad adaptation that's also a bad series (looking at you, Rings Of Power)! It's on my list. It's just a very, very long list. The Institute (MGM+) I need to start The Institute now that my evenings of The Shield have come to an end. It actually sounds like a good show to tide us over while we wait for the return of Stranger Things. The series is based on Stephen King's novel, and follows the kidnapping of a young boy who wakes up in an institute for children with super powers. I've heard positive things from readers. The third episode lands on MGM+ this Sunday. Other Currently Airing Shows Nautilus (AMC) — Based on Jules Verne's Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea, Nautilus follows Nemor's mission to exact revenge on the East India Mercantile Company Countdown (Prime Video) — Another show I need to start now that I'm no longer watching The Shield every night like some absolute junky. I do enjoy a good race-against-the-clock thriller, and while the reviews haven't been spectacular, I've heard from a lot of people that they're enjoying this one. Smoke (Apple TV+) — Aaron Egerton stars as an arson investigator who gets drawn into a murder investigation / conspiracy. Mystery author Dennis Lehane is the show's creator. Stick (Apple TV+) — Owen Wilson stars in this golf-themed feel-good comedy. Light summer character fare to offset all the grim and gritty. The Gilded Age (HBO) — The lavish HBO period drama will transport you to the "gilded age" of East Coast America in the late 19th century. Still on my backlog, but my do those costumes look lovely. The Buccaneers (Apple TV+) — The Buccaneers is more Bridgerton than Downton Abbey, but should appeal to fans of period romance and all things. BMF (Starz) — A dramatization of the rise of the Black Mafia Family in Detroit and elsewhere in the 1980s and 90s. I've heard it called the "Black Sopranos" so if that sounds like your thing, give it a shot. I went to Superman and didn't like it very much.
